

Interview with Participants

Interview with Participants

Interviewer (A): Hey there, folks! Welcome to our brainstorming session focused on delivering relevant and on-demand information about the environmental and social impact of the Olympics through our platform! But before we get down to business, let's take a moment to introduce ourselves and get to know each other a bit better:

- Participant 1: Hey, could you tell us your name and a little bit about yourself?
- Participant 2: Hi there! Same for you, please.
- Participant 3: And you, what's your story?

Participant 1: Hey, I'm Alex. I've always been passionate about sustainability and technology, so I'm excited to explore ways to make a positive impact with our platform.

Participant 2: Hi everyone, I'm Bella. I'm an avid supporter of social causes and love finding innovative ways to use technology for good.

Participant 3: Hey, Chris here. I've got a background in environmental science and data analysis, and I'm thrilled to bring my expertise to the table.

Interviewer (A): Thanks for introducing yourselves, team! Now, let's kick things off with a fun icebreaker:

Interviewer (A): Tell us about your favorite Olympic moment in 30 seconds or less. Alex, why don't you start us off?

Alex: Sure thing! One of my favorite Olympic moments was during the Sydney 2000 Games when Cathy Freeman won the gold medal in the 400m sprint. It was not just about her athletic prowess but also the powerful symbolism of her victory for indigenous Australians.

Interviewer (A): That sounds incredibly inspiring, Alex! Bella, how about you? What's your standout Olympic memory?

Bella: My favorite Olympic moment was during the London 2012 Games when the entire stadium erupted in applause as the athletes entered during the opening ceremony. It was a beautiful display of unity and sportsmanship.

Interviewer (A): That sounds like an amazing experience, Bella! Chris, what's your favorite Olympic memory?

Chris: One of my favorite Olympic moments was witnessing the eco-friendly initiatives at the Sochi 2014 Winter Olympics, such as the use of renewable energy sources and sustainable building materials. It was a great example of how large-scale events can prioritize environmental sustainability.

Interviewer (A): Thanks for sharing those awesome memories, everyone! Now, let's shift gears and tackle our challenge:

Participant B (Time-Keeper): Alright, team, let's get down to business! We've got 10 minutes to explore the problem and 20 to brainstorm. Let's make every minute count!

Interviewer (A): Thanks for keeping us on track, Bella! So, let's dive into it. How can we provide relevant and on-demand information about the environmental and social impact of the Olympics through our platform? Any initial thoughts, gang?

[The interview continues, progressing through each step of the ideation process as outlined in the workshop script.]

Participant C (Logistics Focus): Alright, folks, time's up for brainstorming! Let's move on to the idea sharing phase. Each participant will have the opportunity to share their ideas with the group. Remember to be concise and clear in your descriptions.

[Participants take turns sharing their ideas, while others listen attentively and offer feedback.]

Interviewer (A): Thanks for sharing your fantastic ideas, everyone! Now, let's move on to the refinement phase. We'll take the most promising concepts and work together to refine them further. This is where we'll address any potential challenges and flesh out the details to make our digital sport idea even stronger.

[Participants engage in discussion, refining and enhancing the most promising ideas.]

Participant B (Time-Keeper): Alright, folks, let's keep the momentum going! We're halfway through the refinement phase, so let's make sure we're staying focused and making the most of our time.

Interviewer (A): Great reminder, Bella. Let's continue collaborating and building upon each other's ideas to create something truly remarkable!

[Participants continue refining their ideas, addressing challenges, and adding more depth to their concepts.]

Participant C (Logistics Focus): Time's up for refinement! Now, it's time for the voting process. Each of you has three votes to allocate among the ideas presented. Let's take a moment to consider which ideas resonate with us the most.

[Participants allocate their votes to the ideas they find most compelling.]

Interviewer (A): Thank you all for your thoughtful votes! Now, let's tally them up and determine which idea has the most support from the group.

[After tallying the votes...]

Interviewer (A): And the winning idea is... [Announces the idea with the most votes]. Great job, everyone, for your creativity and collaboration!